Book Description

Jennifer Post Modern, is the famed AD 100 designer’s newest collection of interiors, a select group that takes us on a new journey, one where organic translates to luxury, where infusions of color are woven into breathtaking, dramatic spaces.

“It is a collection made possible by clients who have given me creative freedom to translate their desires to live and experience their spaces in very distinct ways,” she notes.

This, her second monograph, is a new design declaration for Post whose less is more philosophy continues her story, but this time, she infuses her work with softer movements, and a color palette that mines the landscape. Comprised of her latest and most significant projects to date, many are located in Manhattan’s most luxurious and noteworthy high-rises where breathtaking views dovetail with her designs to create a flawless spectrum of energy. In addition, projects in the Hamptons, Florida and the Caribbean showcase her design shift with nature, light, and water playing off tranquil themes. Three double-page gatefolds bring readers into a few of the choice interiors, leaving the reader wondering what comes next, not only in this monograph, but in his dynamic, design perfectionist’s career.
